

Former Attorney Jenny Lightman trades courtroom for art studio

Ardmore, Pa. (October 15, 2015) – Former attorney Jenny Lightman is reinventing herself in a colorful way. The Pennsylvania native and University of Pennsylvania graduate has become an entrepreneur and will open a Pinot's Palette studio in Lower Merion later this month.

Lightman practiced law in Los Angeles for 6 years before moving to Atlanta, where she had her two boys, Adin and Jacob. After returning to Pennsylvania in 2004, Lightman began looking for a more entertaining career that would allow her to spend more time with her family.

"I'm excited to bring people together," Jenny said. "I'm looking forward to having people in the studio bonding, painting and being able to leave with a tangible souvenir of their experience."

The newest upscale entertainment destination to "paint, drink and have fun" takes off with a Media Night event on October 16. Classes open to the public beginning on October 22.

Pinot's Palette provides all art supplies needed for each painting class. Guests can register online now to attend two-hour or three-hour classes. During each class a local artist will help guests recreate a selected piece of art step-by-step.

Private parties, fundraisers and company team-building events are also offered in the roomy main studio. Pinot's Palette Lower Merion also provides a perfect venue for bachelorette parties, girls' night out, birthdays, and other group activities. Guests can even request one-of-a-kind artwork for the evening. More information is available at <http://www.pinotpalette.com/lowermerion>.
